

Roll Count Write Amount Game

Dice games are a great way to build subitizing counting skills. These mats will help children identify a number without counting.

Give each child a roll and count mat and a number dice or dotted dice. Have the children roll a dice and identify the number on the dice (say it). Once they have identified the number have them count out the objects (count it). After the children have counted out the right amount of objects have them write the number on the math mat with a dry erase marker (write it).
